Southern Offers To Cut Ice to 55 Cents; Is Rejected

Mayor Vesey Announces Refusal of Counter Proposal

ASK 50-CENT PRICE

Hope Wants Parity With Similar Sized Cities in State

A counter proposal to reduce the price of ice from 60 to 55 cents a hundred has been made by the Southern Ice & Utilities Co., but rejected by the city, Mayor John Vesey announced Monday.

The Southern Ice made its offer direct to the city government when it learned through newspaper reports that Hope had petitioned the Arkansas Railroad Commission to order a reduction in the local rate structure.

Hope represented to the commission that cities of similar size in this state were paying 50 cents or less, compared to 60 cents in Hope.

The ice company offered to reduce to 55 cents, on coupon books only—which the city flatly rejected, the mayor said.

The counter-proposal came direct from the company, without being officially recognized by the Railroad Commission. The commission has not yet taken action regarding the Hope petition, but rejection by the city of the company's independent offer is expected to bring matters to a head at an early date.

Regular procedure on ice cases is for the commission to hand down a decision on the facts as presented in the plaintiff's petition and the records of the commission's office, and then, if the outcome is unsatisfactory, to either the city or the ice company, an open hearing is ordered, at which time both sides are permitted to present their full case.

Walker's Removal Sure to Be Asked

Roosevelt Not Likely to Act Before Democratic Convention

NEW YORK.—Samuel Seabury, lawyer of the Hofstadter Legislative Committee, expects to complete his investigation of Mayor James J. Walker within the next two days.

Indications are that the investigation, so far as it relates to Mayor Walker's affairs, will be finished this week and that counter charges against the mayor will be filed with Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt next week.

Friends of the governor, friends of the mayor and members of the committee all regard the filing of charges as certain. They do not believe that there will be sufficient time for the governor to take action on them, either by dismissal of the charges or by removal of the mayor, before the Democratic convention convenes at Chicago on June 27.

Several civic groups are believed ready to prefer charges if Mr. Seabury should indicate his preference for such a course. Members of the Citizens Union group, headed by William J. Schiefelbusch, have expressed in private belief that the testimony before the committee warrants the bringing of charges. Members of the City Affairs Committee, which brought charges against the mayor last year through John Haynes Holmes and Dr. Stephen S. Wise, are said to be ready to renew their efforts to bring about Mayor Walker's removal if Mr. Seabury does not bring the charges.

Searches For Brother
NEW YORK.—(AP)—The New York Herald Tribune says Mayor Walker is co-operating with the Hofstadter legislative investigation in attempting to locate Dr. William Walker, his brother, for questioning in connection with municipal government.

The mayor, who spent Sunday resting at a Long Island beach club, is said by the paper to have instructed a secretary to learn Dr. Walker's whereabouts from his relatives so that he might take the stand when the committee resumes public hearings Tuesday. Walker is represented as not knowing where his brother is nor able to explain why he can not be located.

Samuel Seabury, who unsuccessfully has sought the physician since May 19, desires to examine him regarding payments for "medical services" he received from William J. Scanlan.

Hempstead Bed Came From Cuba Years Ago

Old Furniture and Silver of Trimble Family Furnishes Interesting Story for High School History Class Writer

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article was awarded first place in a theme-writing competition on Hempstead county topics, conducted in the sophomore history class of Miss Martha Virginia Stuart at Hope High School. Here, Ruth Atkins is writing about rare old furniture and silverware to be found in Hempstead county. Three other articles also written by members of the sophomore history class will appear later in The Star. One deals with the history of the Shaver Springs community, southwest of Hope; another tells the story of the county courthouse at Washington; and still another, the history of the old state capitol at Washington.

By Ruth Atkins
Furniture cannot talk and tell the weird, breath-taking blood-tingling stories of the past. But I'm sure if it could the furniture of Miss Bess Trimble would tell stories that we have never heard before.

The Trimble family has resided in Washington for generations and have many sterling traits. They possess many pieces of beautiful old furniture. Among them are: A canopy bed, wardrobe, bureau, two settees, six straight chairs, two candle stick holders and an old clock.

The bed made of very soft and beautifully carved wood has four tall, but small, posts, and attached to each is a silver cord. A beautiful canopy made of fine needle point mesh hangs from this cord down to the floor. The lace which was very expensive, is now turning yellow with age.

At the top of the bed a beautiful colored silk is stretched from post to post. This silk which is of the finest material came from China. Every color of the rainbow is visible in this one piece of silk. The bed was purchased one hundred fifty years ago by the great-grandfather of Miss Bess Trimble in New Orleans from the Ruler of Cuba. He was stranded there and sold the bed very cheap.

This piece of furniture has been in this one family eighty-five years. Imagine sleeping in the bed that at one time belonged to a ruler in a far-off country. Wouldn't it be great fun to be propped up by many beautiful pillows and pretend you were a prince or princess, and have many servants to wait upon you? And at night when you fall asleep dream of fairies like you read about in Alice of Wonderland.

Bodenhamer Hits Bonus Payment in Stuttgart Speech

Former National Commander of Legion Opens Campaign for Senate

OPPOSES CASH PAY

First Obligation Is to Widows, Orphans and Victims of War

STUTTGART.—O. L. Bodenhamer, El Dorado business man, opened his campaign for the United States senate here Saturday night, pledging himself to fight for a reduction in the cost of government operation and for the creation of employment as a temporary aid to the jobless.

Making the first campaign address of his life, Bodenhamer told the 2,500 persons who attended the rally dedicated to him, that the favored federal relief to the farmer, revision of the tariff structure, a strong policy of Americanism, federal regulation of interstate transportation agencies, and an equalization of the educational opportunities of children in all states.

He opposed cancellation of the war debts and "entangling alliances," which he declared would jeopardize our prestige in international affairs. Describing every tax dollar as a "sacrifice," Bodenhamer demanded a "positive and definite reduction in the cost of government operation." The El Dorado candidate said that 20 million people are dependent on the government for their livelihood today "while the real producers are suffering from want of food and clothing."

Attacks Bureaucracy
Bodenhamer said that he would fight for the passage of bills to reduce the earnings of high salaried government officials; for the discharge of "broken down politicians who write and send out thousands of unreadable pamphlets at government expense" for the consolidation of "lapping and overlapping" bureaus; and for the elimination of "fat jobs" for the relatives of government officials.

He charged that leaders in Congress are trying to find "ways of raising taxes rather than reduce the cost of government."

Cotton Eases Off During Past Week

New England Textile Mills at Lowest Ebb This Spring

MEMPHIS.—(U. S. Department of Agriculture)—The cotton market during the period May 21 to 27 witnessed a quiet tone with quotations May 27th about 1/4c lower than those May 20th. Both foreign and domestic demand for spot cotton was stated as slow with spot transactions small and limited largely to middleling and strict middleling in the lengths 7-8 inch to 15-16 inch. Domestic mills were said to be almost entirely out of the market at this time for raw cotton.

The new crop was said to be progressing rather favorably and according to the Weather Bureau for the past week cotton needed higher temperatures, especially in the eastern half of the belt.

The rains of the week in the east half were decidedly favorable and notwithstanding the coolness the outlook materially improved in the southeast. There was too much rain locally in the east Gulf sections, but damage to the crop was not extensive.

Bro. Bright of Emmet unveiled the picture of Bro. Prescott, aged past master and secretary of Zenith lodge No. 681. He honored Bro. Prescott for the great Masonic life that he had lived, which was a good example for the younger Masons.

A. M. McKamey of Hope, past worshipful master of Fredonia lodge No. 229, Bald Knob, Ark., and stereotyped lecturer of Whitfield lodge No. 238, followed the unveiling with an address in honor to the three aged Masons, and what their lives meant to their families, and the communities in which they live.

Bro. Chas. Robbin of Hope, Past Worshipful Master of Argenta lodge, North Little Rock, Ark., followed Bro. McKamey's address, in which he paid tribute to the virtues of the aged Masons referred to by the other speakers. Bro. Robbin is also a Masonic instructor.

Mrs. Jordan Worthey, Matron of the Eastern Star, spoke briefly on the relationship of the Eastern Star to the Masonic fraternity, expressing her appreciation of the meeting and the great characters that had been honored by the unveiling of their pictures. She very kindly extended an invitation to all members of Eastern Star to visit them when possible.

At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served by the ladies of the Eastern Star. Everybody felt that they had been benefited by their being there. The committee plans to have many other meetings of such nature in the future.

Carload Shipment Allows Good Price For County Beans

Cost of Expressing Truck Crop Would Have Been Prohibitive

$1.25 PER BUSHEL

Month Seed Store Completes Car From Local Farmers

A carload shipment of beans will leave Hope by freight Tuesday morning for Champaign, Ill.

Monts Seed store, local produce buyers, have been buying beans from local growers for the past few days. Only because this produce can be shipped by freight was it possible to pay the farmers enough for their product to make it worth while to gather them, said Clyde Monts.

The beans were sold at $1.25 per bushel, as good a price as has been offered him this season, he said. But the express on a bushel of beans to this point figures 75c, packing costs figure around 15c, and the northern produce dealer's commission the same amount. This leaves only 20c for the grower and shipper, Monts said. However, the freight rate in carload quantities figures only slightly more than half the cost of expressing; thus enabling this large sale of truck garden produce.

As an illustration of the high cost of shipping vegetables by express, Monts received three two-cent postage stamps Monday in full and complete payment for a bushel of cucumbers shipped to Kansas City last Thursday. The Missouri produce dealer sold the cucumbers for $1.25. Express was $1.00, and the commission 12c, leaving a balance due Monts of 5c. However, the commission man enclosed 6c in stamps in paying for the vegetable.

Monts explained that these cucumbers were of the very finest grade, having been given a No. 1 grade by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. They were packed according to the accepted method of packing this product, he said.

Dr. B. W. Torreyson Dies of Apoplexy

Was President Emeritus of State Teachers College at Conway

CONWAY.—Dr. Burr Walter Torreyson, aged 76, president emeritus of the Arkansas State Teachers College at Conway, died at his home in Conway Saturday night at 9:45 Sunday night.

He suffered the fatal stroke only a few hours before his death.

Dr. Torreyson had served as president emeritus of the college since ill health caused his retirement from the active presidency two years ago. The body will be taken to Fort Smith Monday, where funeral services will be held at the First Presbyterian church at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday.

Dr. Torreyson was born at Hillsboro, Va., December 18, 1865, the son of James W. and Sarah Stone Torreyson. He was educated in the public school at Hillsboro, from which he graduated in 1870; the National Normal School at Lebanon, Ohio, and the University of Chicago. The University of Arkansas conferred upon him the LL. D. degree.

Following several years of teaching in Missouri Dr. Torreyson, in 1893, moved to Fort Smith where for 12 years he was principal and then superintendent of city schools. He went to Little Rock in 1905 as superintendent of schools, and resided in 1909 to become state high school inspector. He was active in the latter capacity until 1917, when he accepted the presidency of Arkansas State Teachers College here. During the presidency of Dr. Torreyson the Teachers College enjoyed a phenomenal growth, both in physical equipment and in students and curricula.

Dr. Torreyson was a charter member of the Arkansas Education Association and served as chairman of its Board of Trustees from the date of its organization until his resignation last year. He also served as president of that body.

Dr. Torreyson was married June 30, 1898, to Miss Alice Baultin of Fort Smith. Besides his widow, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Gus Allison of Conway, a grandson, James Torreyson Allison, and a sister, Mrs. E. M. Pursey of Washington.

The death of Dr. Torreyson occurred shortly after the baccalaureate service at the Teachers College had been preached by Dr. J. H. Buchanan of El Dorado. Dr. Torreyson was a supporter of the Democratic party. He was a member of the Presbyterian church, of which he was a deacon, and also was a member of the Conway Rotary Club.

$246,000 Friend

Testifying before the Hofstadter committee in New York City, Paul Block, publisher, said he had opened a joint brokerage account for Mayor Walker from which the mayor received $246,000 profits without investing anything. Block, who is shown on the stand, said the money was just a friendly gift. "When I told my son Walker I had $25,000 a year, he asked, 'Can he live on that?'" Block testified. "It was at that moment I made up my mind to do something for Jimmy."

50 Unissued Auto Licenses Missing

Tags Recovered at Ozark Said to Have Been in Stolen Series

LITTLE ROCK.—At least 50 sets of unissued automobile license tags are missing from the state Highway Department offices, it was reported Sunday night after representatives of the department and of the Highway Audit Commission had their check of the stock on hand.

This report, however, was not confirmed by Highway Department officials who have not revealed the trend of their investigation since the recovery of a set of unstolen tags by a highway patrolman, nearly a week ago.

That license tags are in use which were not regularly issued was first disclosed when Highway Patrolman Will Day arrested O. E. Brown, who lives about 12 miles south of Little Rock on the Arch Street pike, last Tuesday at Ozark. The officer knew that numbers of that series had not been issued and he took Brown and a woman who was traveling with him before a justice of the peace who allowed them to leave jewelry as security for their return to face trial.

Since then efforts to locate Brown have been unsuccessful, as far as can be learned. It at first was believed that the tags on Brown's automobile were counterfeit, but highway officials have admitted that they were genuine.

A second set of stolen tags was recovered Friday and highway patrolmen questioned Buddy Basham, who lives near Brown's home, it was reported Saturday.

An employee of the department indicated Friday that the tags missing from the office are in the series between 146-450 and 146-500. At that time, however, officials of the department said that they did not know how many of the plates had been stolen.

WORCESTER, Mass.—When a thief broke into the restaurant at which Rose Benoit was cashier, he found her to be very unyielding in submitting to the holdup. She wrestled with the robber, took his gun away from him and turned him over to the authorities of the Worcester State Hospital, from which he was out on parole. The gun he used was one of the harmless cigarette case variety.

Former Cowboy Is Forced to Return After Start Sunday

Will Attempt to Capture Prize for Flight to Tokyo, Japan

OIL LINE GOES BAD

Harold Bromley Begins Transcontinental Flight Across U. S. Monday

(By Associated Press)
Solitary skies smiled a dare Monday to two Texas Rangers.

Nat Brown, Texas cowboy turned flier, prepared to take-off again Monday, hoping to capture the model prize for the man who makes a successful flight from America to Japan before June 1.

He started Sunday from Seattle but was forced to turn back when an oil line went bad.

He was in the air seven and one half hours.

Harold Bromley, another Texan, with long distance flying ambitions had a long days transcontinental flight ahead of him from New York to Burbank, Calif.

Stanislaus F. Hauser, American flier, who was forced to turn back last week from a trans-Atlantic flight to London and Paris plans to try his trip again Tuesday.

Bromley to Cross U. S.

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Harold Bromley, Dallas flier, took off in his oil-burning monoplane from New York City Monday morning, hoping to make a non-stop flight to Burbank, Calif.

Seattle, Wash.—(AP)—Nathan C. Browne, New York flier, was forced back on an attempted non-stop flight from Seattle to Tokyo Sunday by the rupture of an oil line in his monoplane, the Lone Star.

Narrowly escaping death in the take-off from a ramp at Boeing field, blinded temporarily by hot oil and forced to drop some of his fuel supply to gain altitude, Browne returned to the field after several hours in the air and at once made plans for another attempt Monday.

While half a dozen mechanics tore into his plane to determine what caused the oil line to break and to repair a broken stabilizer control wires, Browne sought attention for his oil scalded eyes. The wires were broken when Browne's plane dived through freestops after his dash down the runway.

Browne expressed belief that the stabilizer would have fallen off before he reached Tokyo, but he pushed on until the oil line broke. He was gone about seven hours and a half and had reached the north tip of Vancouver island.

Hope Improves as Poultry Market

Four Commission Houses Complete Here for Eggs and Chickens

That Hope has become an excellent market for the shipping of eggs and poultry for the first time in many years is indicated in a survey made Monday by the Star.

For the past four months four large poultry commission houses have sent trucks into Hope to compete against each other in buying up chickens and eggs from local dealers. Although trucks have called on Elvins and McCaskill dealers for several years, as well as on Nashville, Howard county, no buyers have made any town in the south part of the county before, it is understood. These four outlets have made it worth while for Hope dealers to handle this class of produce at a relatively high market price, for the first time.

Heretofore, dealers handled such small quantities that they were forced to offer prices of 2c and even 3c per pound for poultry, under what was paid in the towns in the north part of the county. With these outlets, however, Hope often posts higher prices than prevail in neighboring communities, it is understood.

The four commission houses who send trucks into Hope each week are: Paris (Texas) branch of Swift & Co., the Market Products company of Shreveport; E. H. Morehead, an independent buyer from New Orleans; and N. F. Blackard, an independent buyer from Longview, Texas.

operation," which he said is 13 million dollars daily. "I enlist with those who will seek for a reduction in cost rather than adding taxes on an already tax-burdened people. However, if taxes must be increased temporarily to meet the emergency, I favor adding taxes on those ten able to pay," he said.

"For ten years the American farmer has been fighting a losing battle. Farmers have been relieved of almost everything except their mortgages. The American farmer does not want charity—he wants a market and a fair price for his products." Bodenhamer announced himself in favor of giving the Farm Board, which he admitted had made mistakes, a chance. "It required years to perfect the Federal Reserve System," he said.

The farmer, he said, is indebtedness contracted at high prices, must be refinanced to allow him to pay back his debt in long term, low interest payments. The scalper and the gambler must be routed from his haunts," he asserted.

Against Cash Bonuses

"Announcing his stand on the bonus question, Bodenhamer declared, 'My stand is the same today as it was 12 years ago. Political expediency has not altered by views. I favor the bonus as a matter of justice but I am opposed to immediate cash payment at the expense of the widows, orphans and victims of the World War. Payment of the soldier's bonus is an obligation of the government which must and will be paid. Immediate payment is urged as a relief for unemployment. Unemployment relief involves eight millions of people from all classes, veteran and non-veteran alike. One cannot be given relief at the expense of another. If this congress, however, does not adopt adequate relief of unemployment, or if a satisfactory plan is not devised prior to the convening of the next congress, then I shall favor immediate cash payment of the bonus as an emergency relief measure," he said.

Discussing unemployment, Bodenhamer said, "The government can create a limited number of jobs which in turn will stimulate additional jobs and it can lend its credit to help business recover." Citing the two billion dollars made available to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Bodenhamer said that that money "has not filtered down from the banks and trust boxes of financial centers."

The Lone Star State's Bid For White House Honors—Texas Jack Garner

A Presidential Boom That Began With a Rush to Collapse in a Single Day—Revived to Hang on the Thread of Chance

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—Speaker Jack Garner's presidential boom developed with a sudden rush, aided by a generally high opinion of his leadership in the House.

Then it seemed to collapse in a single day—that day on which the House revolted against both the Democratic and Republican leadership, refusing to impose a sales tax on the country as recommended by the leaders.

The Garner boom has revived somewhat since his unexpected victory in the California primaries over Governor Roosevelt and Al Smith. It doesn't look nearly as husky as it did before the sales tax vote. And the recent House rebellion against the omnibus economy bill hasn't helped it. But Garner is expected to have the third largest number of delegates on the first ballot at Chicago and it is too early to count him out.

Through these ups and downs Garner has not said a word or lifted a finger to indicate his unquestionable normal desire for the presidency. The support he has had has come without his seeking.

A true picture of Garner's career as speaker in the last five months indicates that his national prestige and his chances of nomination may have suffered more than they deserved. Garner, after all, has been constantly in the spotlight, right under the gun, while other Democratic presidential possibilities have been subject to no such dangers.

It is perhaps idle to guess whether another man could have done a better job than Garner, but the matter is open to argument.

The theory that any leader could control a house of Congress at all times with a skimpy majority of five votes seems slightly fantastic. Minority Leader Bert Snell has had no more luck controlling his Republicans this year than Garner has had with his Democrats.

Republicans in former years have controlled the House only by virtue of large majorities and firm repressive rules. Garner unquestionably could have displayed greater political sagacity in handling the tax and economy bills, but this year congressmen are frightened about their jobs and unusually subject to outside pressure.

Garner's task has been delicate and he has usually avoided taking strong public positions.

It also is argued by his friends, in opposition to the theory that Garner has flopped miserably at the job, that he has been up more than a victim of his traditionally Democratic policy of liberalization of the House rules.

By use of a gag rule, the most able parliamentarians here feel, the Democratic leadership could have imposed both the sales tax and the economy bill through the House. That is what would have happened, presumably, if the old Republican machine had been in control.

But Garner and the Democrats always have stood for free expression of the will of the House and the first thing they did last December was to work out a plan of rules revision, which made it much easier for the House to act against the wishes of its leaders.

So the bills were brought in under the most liberal possible rules, the opposition had time to form, and the House, acting as an uncontrolled legislative body, built up a bad reputation for itself in conservative quarters. And Garner, from the standpoint of his boom, suffered worst of all. Partly because he had an impossible job and partly because he failed to display his qualities of leadership at a time when that was generally expected of him.

He may be properly accused of bad political judgment in espousing the sales tax and he was willing to let the House take its course, instead of leaping into the fight until it was all over.

It seems unlikely that the Democrats will nominate him in Chicago, even if Roosevelt is pushed out of the picture. But he may yet regain some of his apparent former strength. His general record is excellent for a presidential nominee, despite his two main handicaps: the fact that he is the man, who couldn't control the House and the fact that he is a southerner.

The speaker's name is not expected to figure in any more primaries. Most state primary laws insist on some declaration from anyone who enters the sales tax vote. And the recent House rebellion against the omnibus economy bill hasn't helped it. But Garner is expected to have the third largest number of delegates on the first ballot at Chicago and it is too early to count him out.

Through these ups and downs Garner has not said a word or lifted a finger to indicate his unquestionable normal desire for the presidency. The support he has had has come without his seeking.

mission if nominated.

Taxation: Stresses paramount need of maintaining nation's financial integrity. Believing the method of secondary importance. Has fought for maintenance of estate, income and has favored higher taxes on high bracket incomes. Accepted sales tax idea reluctantly.

Unemployment Relief: Opposed to "dole." Favors federal assistance, if any, through appropriations for highways and public works. Supported the voting of 40,000,000 bushels of farm Board wheat for the unemployed.

War Debts: Opposed cancellation and caused House Democrats to tack onto the Reconstruction resolution the declaration that Congress approved any cancellation, reduction, or favorable consideration of such policy at any time.

Government Regulation and Ownership: Favors regulating public utilities of all kinds. Inspired enmity of "Power trust" by hard work for Muscle Shoals and Boulder Dam legislation. He is credited, however, with responsibility for recent passage of the House Muscle Shoals bill which is unsatisfactory to friends of the Norris measure.

Farm Relief: Voted for all such measures, including equalization fee and export, debenture plans. Believes ultimate solution lies largely in co-operation.

Tariffs: Favors "reasonable protection," which will not be burdensome on poor people for benefit of large, profitable corporations.

place of the old you and I might perhaps have had more fun when we played hide and seek in the old house on cold winter days.

The large bureau is made of walnut and marble. It has two small drawers on each side at the top and three large ones at the bottom, separated by strips of marble. The bottom drawer, touches the floor. This piece came from New Orleans and was very hard to obtain.

In this same set of furniture, are two walnut settees, upholstered with black horse hair and well polished. They are large enough so that three or four persons could be seated in one comfortably.

The beautiful candle stick holders are made of cut glass and brass. The bottom of the holder is in the form of a square and is made of brass. The body is made of cut glass and is very beautiful. Indeed, in a dark room it shines like a diamond. Hanging from the top there is a great cluster of crystals which are cut in various shapes and forms giving off a soft light. These holders have been in the family seventy-five years and are greatly treasured.

The clock made of pure white Italian marble and gold is one of the most interesting of the antiques. An emigrant from Italy left his native land with this article on his back and came to the United States. This clock had been in his family for four hundred years, but on account of lack of funds he had to sell it. The hands and pins are made of cold gold. It is very heavy and still keeps good time. Wouldn't you like to have a clock of this type wake you in the morning and tell you you'd better hurry or you would be late for school?

The six chairs, it is said formerly belonged to a family of nobility, are upholstered with black horse hair. They are large and comfortable and have beautiful cushions with pictures of great buildings embroidered on them. They have, also, been in this family for seventy-five years.

These six chairs being so tall and straight must have been fun for some of the boys, who liked lawyers and wanted to be one to sit in them with a very earnest thoughtful look on their face perhaps and pretended to be in court or conference.

Bruening Cabinet Resigns Monday

Chancellor of German Republic Gives Up After 2 Years Hard Fight

BERLIN.—(AP)—Chancellor Heinrich Bruening and the members of his cabinet resigned Monday and their resignations were accepted by President Paul von Hindenburg.

The stern hard fisted chancellor, who in a little over two years has guided the German Republic through unprecedented storms and financial near collapse, finally lost in an uphill fight against growing nationalism and dissatisfaction with government emergency decrees.

President Paul von Hindenburg had requested the chancellor to alter his program and make concessions to the Junkers and Hitlerites who appear to have influenced the president during his visits to East Prussia.

Many officials called on Hindenburg dollars. The tea-spoons are used regularly and have been for some time, while the table spoons are used for cooking. They were at one time about twice as large as our table and tea-spoons, but have worn down to about half their original size. May be that is the reason for the sterling qualities of the Trimbles.

This old furniture and other collections in this old pioneer family are by far more beautiful than any modern furniture. Hempstead county should be proud indeed of such a rare collection of antiques.

TO THE VOTERS

Several weeks ago I announced my candidacy for the office of Circuit Clerk for Hempstead County, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary; and while this is a ministerial office and ordinarily there are no issues between the candidates other than qualifications, there is, with the abnormal conditions and depression that prevail at this time, one question of vital importance to the voters, which I think should be discussed. Therefore, I take this method of explaining my position on this vital question, which is the emoluments of the office.

This office is on a fee basis, and the fees have been constantly raised for the past several sessions of the Legislature. It is my opinion, that under conditions which prevail, that the fees of this office should be reduced, and I promise to reduce the fees allowed to the Circuit Clerk by law at this time 20 per cent.

I further promise that in the event the Legislature, which convenes in January, 1933, changes and reduces the fees to abide by whatever law the Legislature may pass, dating from the day I take office.

I make this latter statement because I am advised that any change made by the Legislature of 1933 with respect to the salaries or fees of County Officers would not become effective until the term for which the various officers were elected had expired.

I feel that I am thoroughly qualified to discharge the duties of the office of Circuit Clerk; and in addition to the promises above mentioned, I promise to render prompt, faithful and efficient service in said capacity.
